Dedicated to holidays lovers
 and frequent hotel stayers

Everyone loves vacation. BUT no one wants the followings to happen during their holiday trips,

Injuries	Lost luggage	Illnesses strike	Personal items stolen

You may have your holiday plan well scheduled and everything seems fine until you checked into the hotel room. There was this intangible force making you uncomfortable but yet you did not know what was it. Have you encounter this before?

Well, it was some kind of negative energies that had been accumulated thru' months or even years created by past guests and occupants that had stayed in the room. Don't ignore these kinds of energy. It can hinder your holiday plans and causes unexpected unhappiness.

Even the best 5 stars hotels are filled with dead, stale chi and predecessor energy. You're also contending with being sandwiched between other rooms and other occupant's energies. Add to this the sharp angles of traditional furniture, the mix of bedroom and bathroom chi, electromagnetic fields, noise, and it's no wonder so many people get hurts while traveling.

So, what should we do when we check into a hotel? Follow the essential feng shui tips below to avoid disappointment whether you are staying in for business or pleasure.

Feng Shui Tips

1. Never accept a dead end room in a long hallway.

- 3 Higher rooms are better because there is less weight on top of you.
- 4 Make sure you are in a room with windows and that windows can open. Stagnant air is unhealthy. Open the windows to let fresh air into your room when you first arrive. Getting the air moving is a great way to introduce good positive Chi.
- 5 In Feng Shui, the elements are fire, earth, metal, water, and wood. Most hotel rooms have plenty of metal, symbolized by the color white. Likewise, the furniture and black accents balance with wood and water, respectively. However, unless the room decor includes red, orange, and yellow or earth tones, the elements of fire and earth are lacking. By planning ahead with travel accessories or small decorative items in these colors, you can restore balance and a sense of comfort to your hotel room.
- 6 Most hotel rooms offer a copy of the Bible. Place the Bible on the desk. Whatever you're spiritual or religious beliefs bringing inspirational materials to start or conclude your day is helpful.

When you travel, if you apply just a few of these recommendations, you will discover renewed enjoyment and energy at each hotel you stay.

Remember, a vacation getaway is all about relaxation and rejuvenation. If a hotel room doesn't meet your need or standards, do not hesitate to ask for another. Bon voyage!
